

NAME'S ORIGIN

AMILCAR Barcas

(c. 285 – c. 228 BCE) was a Carthaginian general active in the First Punic War. He had successfully switched Carthage (North Africa) from a naval power to a land power with great impact, and he firmly established the Barcid family as the ruling house of Carthage. He was the father of Hannibal Barca who continued his father's tactics and won major land battles in Rome (Italy) during the Second Punic War.
